

Job security obsolete for teachers without tenure

by DIANE GRANAT

Losing your job — it's the nightmare of any worker.

But for teachers, it was never a very great fear. For years, schools were crowded and there was a desperate need for teachers. The prospect of being laid off was never too threatening.

But the tables have turned. With declining enrollments and serious financial problems causing major budget cutbacks, laying off teachers has become commonplace in many suburban areas this school year.

IN THE NORTHWEST suburbs

nearly 250 teaching positions were eliminated in elementary school districts for the 1976-77 school year. But this figure may translate into larger numbers of teachers, since two half-time teachers may fill one position.

The teachers who were fired this year were non-tenured, that is, they had not yet worked in their district for the two years needed to gain job security. They are generally young, fresh out of college — losing their jobs after just getting a taste of teaching.

What does it feel like to be a teacher who is laid off?

Frustrating, say most teachers who will agree to talk about their experience. They feel the frustration of waiting, not knowing if their jobs will be cut, the frustration of not being able to follow their chosen profession, the frustration knowing that another teaching job will be awfully hard to find.

ELAINE SMITH, a reading teacher in East Maine Dist. 63 where 32 teaching positions were eliminated, has taught for eight years. But she has only been in Dist. 63 for two years, since her husband's job caused them to move several times, and she had not yet attained tenure when she was dismissed this spring.

"I was totally panicked and frustrated," Mrs. Smith said about learning she had lost her job. "I work not because I have to, but because I love teaching and I love being with the kids. It's my identity, and it's being taken away from me."

Mrs. Smith said the mood among her fellow teachers has been "very down" this spring. "Whenever teachers get together, it's an entire gripe session," she said.

The mood in Dist. 63 was echoed by teachers in neighboring Des Plaines Dist. 62, where 23 teachers were dismissed earlier this year.

"We had teachers crying in the halls when they announced the cuts. It's been hard to put your mind on your work," said Charles Curren, one of the fired teachers in Dist. 62.

CURREN, A PHYSICAL education teacher at South and Plainfield schools in Des Plaines, said his reaction to losing his job was depression — "I lost five pounds and I didn't have any weight to lose."

"I don't want to sound like I'm the only one. People all over the country are going through this, but you never think it's going to hit you," said Curren, whose students are circulating petitions saying they will not attend physical education classes next year unless Curren is their teacher.

Curren and Mrs. Smith lost their jobs because the number of reading and physical education teachers in their districts were being cut and they had the lowest seniority.

But in some other districts, the teachers were fired on the basis of evaluations by their principals.

IN MOUNT PROSPECT Dist. 57, where 15 teachers were laid off for the coming year, the teachers' union

Police union in 3rd bid for recognition

Representatives of the Combined Counties Police Assn. tonight will again ask Wheeling trustees to recognize their union as a bargaining agent for village employees.

Werner Nuspl, CCPA field representative, Friday said a "majority" of the CCPA staff will attend the meeting to seek recognition of their union. The request has been twice rejected by the village board. The board will meet at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Trustees last month ended salary negotiations with village employees, saying there is no money available to grant pay raises in 1976-77. The board also reaffirmed an earlier decision not to recognize the CCPA or its affiliate, the Assn. of Independent Municipal Employees, as bargaining agents for the employees.

JOHN FLOOD, CCPA president, last month asked the board to recognize his union as a bargaining agent for the village's approximately 100 employees. He said he was approached by village employees, who said they were concerned about problems with salary negotiations with the board. The village board in the past has refused to recognize union affiliation by its employees.

Representatives of the police and fire departments have said they will seek union representation in salary negotiations before discussing pay increases. Union officials said that more than 80 per cent of the police department personnel are members of the CCPA and about 90 per cent of the firefighters are AIME members.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon has said the board refused to recognize the unions because "we felt the employees have been getting along very well without a union."

Flood accused village officials with "bad faith" in wage and salary negotiations with employees. He told the board he does not want to "become involved in tough labor relations" with the village.

In 1970, members of the CCPA participated in a 12-day strike against the village in an effort to gain union recognition. An agreement reached between the board and the police said the board would recognize "the duly selected representatives of the majority of the Wheeling Police Dept."

For master plan compliance

Zone hearings set on 4 parcels

The Wheeling Plan Commission will hold public hearings June 17 on rezoning requests concerning four parcels of land to comply with the recently adopted village master plan.

The plan commission last month agreed to hold the public hearings after learning zoning on the parcels of land is in conflict with the master plan. The plan, approved earlier this year by the board, governs the village's future residential, commercial and industrial growth.

The largest parcel to be rezoned is 40 acres on the east side of Wheeling Road, south of St. Alphonsus Church. The village is proposing rezoning it from multi-family to single-family residential.

THREE OTHER small parcels to be rezoned include: a lot on the east side of Buffalo Grove Road, north of the Tahoe Village townhomes from general business to multi-family; a lot on the north side of Dundee Road, west of 12th Street from industrial to office use; and a lot at 370 W. Dundee Rd. from general business to office use.

Acting Village Mgr. Thomas Markus said he foresees no problems in re-zoning the parcels despite a lawsuit brought against the village earlier this year when the board rezoned eight acres west of the village hall.

In that case, the village rezoned the land from industrial to business-commercial use to conform with the comprehensive plan. The board was unsuccessfully sued by Wickes Corp., owner of the lot, and Lexington Development Co., Schaumburg, who had plans to build an office warehouse complex on the site. Under the new zoning classification, the complex is not permitted.

Markus said the current rezoning bids are "totally different" from the Wickes case.

"THERE SHOULD be no trouble. We don't have any plans before us for those parcels. We're permitted to rezone the land at any time," he said.

The comprehensive plan is based on a report by Harland Bartholomew and Associates, a Northbrook planning firm. The firm recommends that the village's future make-up remain predominantly residential with a good mix of multi-family dwellings.

The planner said industry should be kept in the center of the village because of the proximity of the Soo Line R.R. tracks.

Bailey quits, cites political pressure

Kenneth Bailey, Lake County Building Superintendent, has resigned, citing "political pressures to keep my mouth shut" as the reason.

Bailey recently was involved in a controversy when he called Mariellen Sabato, Lake County Board member, a "jackass" at a homeowners' meeting near Gurnee.

Mrs. Sabato requested an investigation of Bailey's actions by the Lake County Building Commission, which employs Bailey. Bailey later apologized for the incident.

Bailey SAID Tuesday "the political pressures they exerted on me to keep my mouth shut were too great." Commenting on Mrs. Sabato, Bailey said, "She is a jackass, the biggest there is. I am sorry I said I am sorry."

Bailey said he has been talking with the Federal Bureau of Investigation about corruption in the county and said the matter will be made public sometime next week.

"There's a lot of hanky panky going on and it turns my stomach," Bailey said.

GLENN REINIER, Lake County Building Commission chairman, said the commission regretfully accepted

Bailey's resignation, effective immediately, at Tuesday's meeting.

"I don't know anything about political pressures," Reinier said. "I haven't had anyone talk to me about him or his job."

Reinier praised Bailey's work as building superintendent for the past eight years.

"We'll be hard pressed to find anyone with all the skills he has," Reinier said.

Theodore Ramp, assistant building superintendent, has been named acting superintendent until a permanent replacement can be found, Reinier said.

THE SEARCH begins for the body of a Chicago man who disappeared Sunday while swimming at Bode Lake.

Chicagoan drowns in lake mishap

A 20-year-old Chicago man drowned Sunday while swimming across Bode Lake west of Hoffman Estates. Scuba divers found the body of Joseph Gordon, 3316 N. Southport Ave., about 15 feet under water. The body was recovered at 5:44 p.m. — four hours after he vanished in the water. Witnesses said Gordon and a companion were about 20 feet from shore when the pair began yelling for help. Wayne Whelpley, 31, of Streamwood dove into the water and attempted to bring Gordon ashore when the struggling swimmer panicked and disappeared under water. Whelpley then pushed Gordon's companion ashore. Bode Lake, a former stone quarry, is located on Cook County Forest Preserve land on Bode Road west of Barrington Road. Swimming in the lake is prohibited.

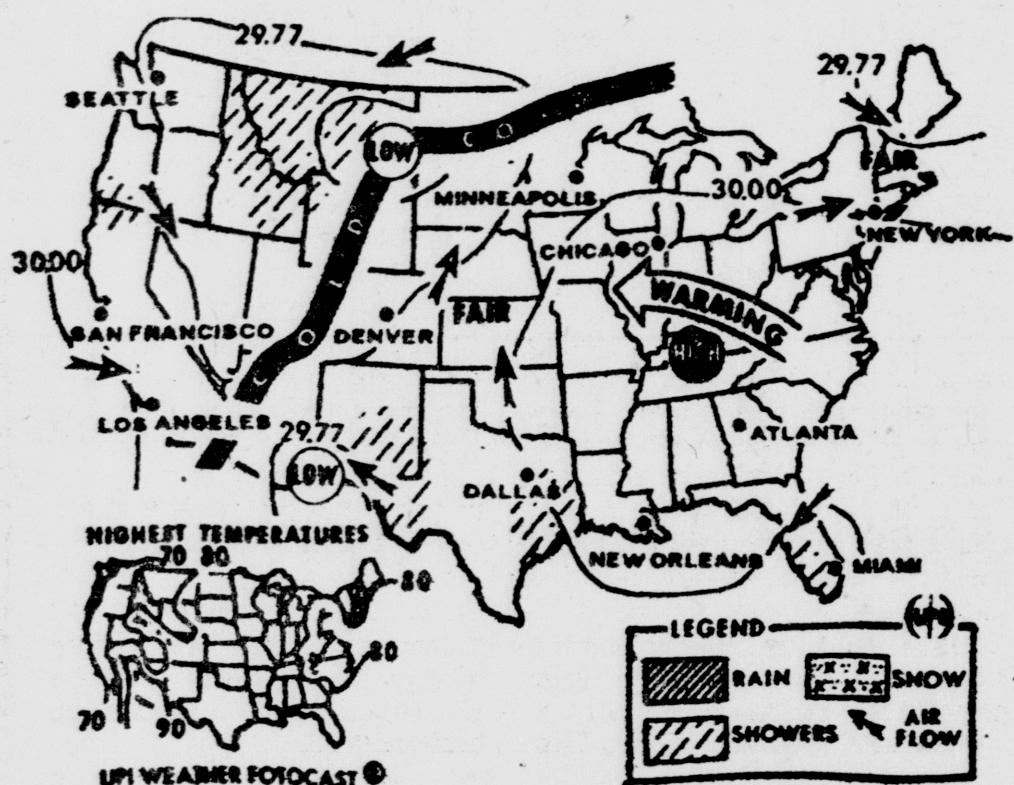

Flu shot program to begin

The swine flu vaccination program will be launched in the Northwest suburbs next month with senior citizens and chronically ill persons receiving inoculations, a Cook County Health Dept. spokesman said during the weekend. Frank Lochner, an epidemiologist with the department, attended a meeting Saturday of Task Force '76, a cooperative of Palatine Township municipal, education and medical organizations planning a township vaccination program. Lochner said the second phase of the county's three-part vaccination program will take place Sept. 10-14 when mass inoculations for every resident in the Northeast suburbs begin. Township supervisor Howard Olsen said he plans to ask officials of Wheeling, Schaumburg and Elk Grove townships if they are interested in establishing a group similar to Task Force '76 to coordinate the vaccination program on an areawide basis.

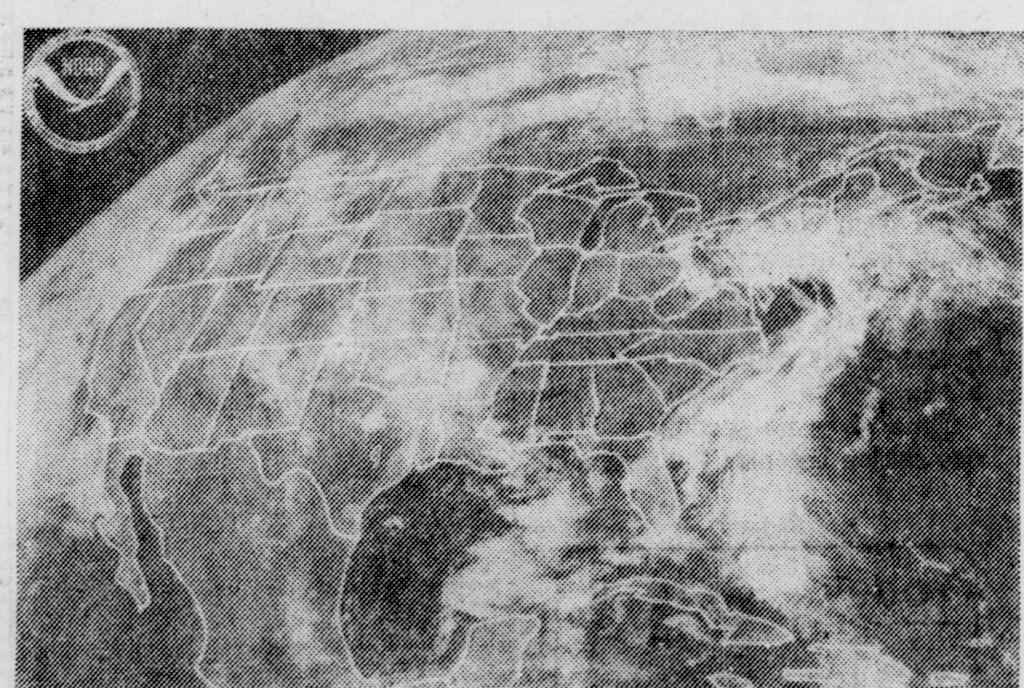

Little interest in cable TV: survey

Fifty-four per cent of the Mount Prospect residents polled in a recent survey said they have "no interest" in cable television, but 43 per cent said they would pay between $1 and $9 monthly for the service. The survey was conducted by the Telcom Engineering Inc. of St. Louis which had been hired by village officials for $10,000 to study the possibility of offering cable television in the village. A spokesman for Telcom said he was surprised to find 96 per cent of the 323 respondents to the poll were familiar with cable television. The firm had distributed 1,300 questionnaires. "We found more people in Mount Prospect willing to pay for it than in other communities," the spokesman said. He said the results of the survey indicate the potential for cable television in the village is "better than average." The firm is recommending village officials approve a $1.2 million system with the village paying an initial $9,000 and the rest of the funding coming from subscribers to the service. Telcom is also recommending an 18-channel system with 9 Chicago channels and 9 from other cities.

Teaching--not immune from layoffs

"The administration is not using the evaluation tool properly," said Ronda McClurg, a Dist. 57 speech therapist who lost her job in the cuts. "There is a difference between the way each principal in the district does the evaluations," she said.

"My evaluations are all good. I didn't see where there was anything wrong," said Mrs. McClurg, who said she felt her dismissal was not fair. "You still feel like you've failed somewhere, even though they tell you they will give you a letter of recommendation."

A teacher in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21, where 50 positions were cut, said the rating scale used to pick which teachers would be fired was ambiguous. "The teachers had no solid idea of how it was done — they should have gone strictly on seniority," said the elementary school teacher who asked not to be identified.

MOST OF THE teachers said they are looking for other teaching jobs, but the prospects are slim. "It's a laugh. There's nothing available," said Mrs. Smith.

Some of the teachers are hoping they will be rehired during the summer due to attrition. Dist. 21 has already reinstated eight of the dismissed teachers and Dist. 62 rehired five teachers recently when the board of education found additional revenue available for the 1976-77 school year.

Mrs. McClurg said if she had the choice of getting her Dist. 57 job back or being hired in another district she would go to the new district, "because they are bound to cut programs here eventually. If I could go to a district where they are building schools, I'd go there," she said.

Several of the fired teachers said it has been hard to stay interested in their work in the past few weeks, knowing they won't be back next year.

"People are trying very hard not to let the kids know," said a Dist. 63 teacher who asked to remain anonymous. "It's hard to keep up your spirits when you know, come mid-June, it's goodbye."

WHAT IS WORSE, said the junior high school teacher, are the prospects for the future. "If there isn't a job this year, will there be one next year don't give them any warning about the job situation," Mrs. Bailie said.

"It will be sad if we put out a lot of good teachers who can't get jobs."

Mrs. Bailie said if she can't find another teaching job she will look for something else.

"Money right now isn't the thing. I love teaching. I don't want to work in a department store," she said.

"Sometimes I wonder if I should have stayed in nursing school."

Fear 'tremendous loss of life' in Idaho

Aerial view shows flooding in downtown Rexburg, Idaho after Teton Dam burst

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Rescue workers, endangered by rattlesnakes seeking dry land, Sunday searched for many persons missing in the devastated farmlands and rural communities swept by the waters from a collapsed dam just built to prevent floods.

Law enforcement officials said they have recovered the bodies of four persons. In the hard-hit town of Rexburg, two persons drowned and a woman died of a heart attack. The fourth body was found just below the Teton Dam. It apparently was that of a fisherman swept away by swirling water Saturday just after the break.

Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said there might be "a tremendous loss of life." Authorities in Rexburg said they had a list of about 30 persons still missing. Some others were reported missing in nearby St. Anthony which had been covered by flood waters.

About 7,000 homes were ruined in the flood, and 30,000 persons were evacuated from seven small communities. It had been feared that the flood waters would sweep through Idaho Falls, causing extensive damage. However, diversionary tactics eliminated the danger.

Authorities continued to check without results on a report of a Boy Scout troop was missing in the area of the dam some 50 miles from Idaho Falls. Rescue helicopters plucked some 30 persons from rooftops and high ground in the Rexburg and St. Anthony areas.

In Rexburg, police said the flood waters dropped from 10 feet to one foot by the afternoon. They said snakes had crawled to high ground and onto dry parts of the wreckage in the center of town. Extra supplies of snake-bite serum were flown there.

Ed Barker of the Idaho Division of Environment said more than 6,000 cattle died in the flood and "this is an extremely bad health hazard." National Guard dump trucks picked up carcasses in the Rexburg area and brought them to a pit for burning.

Bureau of Reclamation Commissioner Gilbert G. Stamm told a news conference in Boise, Idaho, a slight leakage of about 30-second-feet per minute was detected in the 310-foot, earth-fill dam Friday night. But, he said, "slight leakages at the base of an earth-type dam are frequent."

Stamm said the leakage had doubled by morning and it was up to 1,000-second-feet per minute within two more hours. "All emergency measures went into effect immediately," he said when asked whether there was sufficient advanced warning.

He said that the dam rupture was "very unusual. In the bureau's 74-year-history this has never happened before."

About 1,000 farms were reported flooded with 10 per cent of their livestock killed. Horses and cattle were swept away trying to outrace the on-rushing floodwaters.

The governor's office estimated damage at $559 million in Madison County alone. President Ford declared the stricken region a disaster area, qualifying it for federal recovery funds.

The waters from the newly built 310-foot-high dam, which was 75 per cent complete, cut a swath down the center of Rexburg, ripped up houses, tipped trailers, washed cars down a highway, swept away livestock and left huge mud deposits. At least three bridges were destroyed and three major roads swamped.

A second dam in the upper Snake River Valley burst Sunday, pouring flood waters into an irrigation canal, but authorities said they were diverting the waters to eliminate a potential threat to homes of 10,000 to 15,000 persons on the east side of Idaho Falls.

Civil Defense Director Jerry Wadsworth of Idaho Falls, with a population of 40,000, said the Grant Diversion Dam on the Snake River eight miles north of town broke from the pressure of water and debris, loosing into the Idaho Canal waters from Saturday's dam burst 40 miles north of Idaho Falls.

Pro-Syrians attacked in Beirut—showdown brews

B E I R U T , Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanese Air Force planes Sunday strafed Moslem leftist positions in the central mountains and Syrian troops advanced north from the Bekaa valley toward leftist lines, setting up a possible showdown in the 14-month civil war.

In the capital, leftist and Palestinian gunmen attacked pro-Syrian forces throughout the city, seizing the headquarters of the pro-Damascus Baath party and battling Syrian-backed Saiga guerrillas in fierce street clashes.

Initial reports from the mountains said an unknown number of Syria's 12,000-strong invasion and occupation force advanced north from the Bekaa, 30 miles east of Beirut, moving on leftist strongholds around Aintourah and Metein, six miles away.

The Beirut radio station held by the rebel leftist Lebanese Arab Army said the airplanes, apparently piloted by pro-Syrian Lebanese air force officers, strafed leftist advance positions at Dahr El Baider and Mreijat on the Beirut-Damascus highway, and at Tarshish, Aintourah and Metein.

Right-wing sources confirmed the report.

"The raid claimed several dead and wounded, especially at Mreijat," the leftist radio said. "All roads in the area were blocked in the effort to withdraw the wounded."

Lebanon's air force had remained neutral and inactive until the Syrian army overran two major airbases a week ago and caused many officers to join the Syrian force.

In Beirut, leftist and Palestinian gunmen stormed the headquarters of the Lebanese chapter of the Syrian Baath party and ten local party offices, taking sudden revenge for Syria's invasion.

A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization called the surprise attacks "a successful mopping-up operation to eliminate all Saiga presence" from the capital's Moslem-held western sector.

Two leaders of a smaller pro-Syrian party broadcast a statement over the leftist-held Beirut radio opposing the Syrian invasion and declaring "That the Palestinian revolution and the national (leftist) movement have the right to decide the destiny of Lebanon."

There were unconfirmed reports that the two party leaders had been arrested by leftist guerrillas and forced to make the statement.

Several hundred troops of the Syrian-backed Saiga force closed the main highway south from the capital at Khalde, about one mile from the airport, and clashed with units of the leftist Lebanese Arab Army, Palestinian and Leftist sources said.

The warring factions — split over whether to fight the week-old Syrian invasion or welcome it — turned the Moslem sector into a battleground, blocking streets, fighting with rockets, grenades and machine guns and sending volleys of mortars crashing into shops and homes.

Street battles between the nominally Palestinian Saiga troops and guerrillas from anti-Syrian Palestinian groups raged in normally peaceful areas of uptown Beirut, on the city's southern fringes and in the suburbs, killing at least 35 persons and wounding about 60.

Major candidates prowl for votes

by United Press International

The presidential primary campaign got down to the nitty gritty Sunday with all seven major candidates in both parties on the road or on the air.

In frantic search for every single convention delegate available among the 540 Democrats and 331 Republicans being chosen Tuesday in the New Jersey, Ohio and California primaries, issues cropped up — from President Ford talking about busing, to Jimmy Carter and Morris Udall talking about nuclear weapons, to George Wallace condemning full employment legislation as "a complete blueprint for socialization."

The California primary seemed to be the prize of two of the state's governors, Ronald Reagan and Edmund G. Brown, and New Jersey was seen as the preserve of Ford and Carter, with a possible Democratic challenge from an uncommitted slate.

Most of the attention was on Ohio, where Carter, the Democratic favorite, was endorsed by the Cleveland Plain Dealer and where Udall said he would be finished by a loss.

Ford and Reagan were campaigning in Ohio, the President first having gone to New Jersey. Carter also started his day in New Jersey and planned to end up in Ohio. Frank Church, plagued by a virus, had to cancel more appearances in Ohio to go home to Idaho because of the flood disaster. Wallace and Brown campaigned in California.

There was only scattered delegate selection over the weekend, Reagan getting 37 new delegates in Louisiana, Virginia and Colorado to Ford's 1 in Virginia. There were two Louisiana and one Virginia uncommitted delegates chosen. Carter picked up 3 new delegates in Kansas, to Udall's 1 and three uncommitted.

In Minnesota Sunday, Hubert

Humphrey won 12 of 16 remaining delegates to give him 48 of the state's 65, with the other 17 uncommitted and expected to support him if he decides to run.

That made the Democratic delegate race look like this: Carter 91, Udall 306, Henry Jackson 248, Wallace 168, others 298.5 and uncommitted 399.5.

Ford still led Reagan in the GOP delegate battle 823 to 690 with 136 uncommitted.

All the major candidates, except Reagan, appeared on television talk shows Sunday.

• Ford said on TV he is for integrated schools but does not oppose segregated private schools as long as they receive no federal funds or tax breaks.

• Carter said the U.S. while not backing every Israeli position, should let the world know that no matter what, we would provide Israel with whatever economic or military aid she needs to defend herself."

Antitrust measure tops Senate agenda

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate this week continues grappling with sharply contested legislation to make the most significant changes in the nation's antitrust laws in more than 50 years.

Conservative opponents have dozens of amendments in hand, hoping to chip away at some of the sweeping reforms in a substitute amendment offered by Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich.

Last week, the Senate voted cloture to limit debate on the Hart amendment, which would incorporate and expand a House-passed antitrust measure.

But the volume of other pending amendments and the apparent unwillingness of opponents to speed a final vote prompted the Democratic leadership to file another cloture petition Friday on the bill itself.

A key section would allow states to sue for triple damages on behalf of their citizens in antitrust and price fixing cases. A version of this provision has passed the House but is opposed by the administration.

Other sections would impose tough new pre-merger notification requirements on businesses so the Justice Department would have more time to examine proposed mergers for their antitrust impact.

The bill also would expand the Justice Department's powers to investigate and prosecute antitrust violations and improve its ability to require businesses to turn over documents and other information relating to antitrust investigations. Once the antitrust bill is out of the way, the Senate will turn to a foreign military arms sales bill.

Stevenson to choose top students; graduation set

A valedictorian and salutatorian will be selected from among the graduating seniors this year for the first time in the history of Stevenson High School.

The names of the two top scholars will not be revealed until the commencement ceremony Sunday, June 13 at 2:30 p.m. in the football stadium at the school, Ill. Rte. 22, Prairie View. Admission is by ticket only. In case of inclement weather, ceremonies will be held in the school gymnasium.

Supt. Harold Bansen, who is leaving the district after 17 years, will deliver the commencement address to about 260 graduates. Kyle Olexa, president of the senior class, will also address fellow classmates and guests. The Rev. Michael Paul of Long Grove United Church of Christ will deliver the invocation and benediction. Stevenson Principal William Papke, Jr., will introduce the graduating class and Board of Education Pres. W. M. Swanson and Supt. Bansen will present diplomas.

Stevenson's symphonic band, the a capella choir and a special senior choir will present several musical selections during the ceremonies.

Two juniors, Andrew Farrissey and William Papke, will lead the processional as marshalls and 10 other juniors have been selected as ushers by the senior class. They are: Mark Cordes, Jeff Main, Gary McKee, Robert Mohlowski, Jeff Shirley, Ann Bensen, Diane Heese, Joanne Nesci, Lisa Phildius and Ann Young.

For the 11th year Stevenson's faculty will appear in the processional robed in black and the colors of their colleges and universities.

Sue Coles follows Ronald

She'll accept husband's advice

by TIM MORAN

Sue Coles says she will bring her own opinions to the Lake County Board, but she will accept advice from her husband who she is replacing as a county commissioner.

Ronald Coles was convicted on two counts of extortion in March and District 4 precinct committeemen recently elected Mrs. Coles to fill his seat until December, when an elected seat can take office.

"I have firm opinions of my own, but he might give me advice," Mrs. Coles said. "After all, he has served for 12 years in county government."

THE COUNTY board seat is the first political experience for Mrs. Coles other than helping in her husband's campaigns. She said she does not intend to run in the general election for the board seat and has no other political aspirations.

Inevitable comparisons have been made to Cool County politics, where Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane was replaced by his wife following his conviction. Mrs. Coles feels she is qualified for the job:

"I think I'm as qualified as any other candidate to serve. I've worked for 16 years in the county. I think I'm much more qualified than Mrs. Keane, but there really is no comparison."

Mrs. Coles said she felt it better to have someone fill the seat who does not intend to run in the election. An appointed incumbent would have an unfair advantage, she said.

HER 16 YEARS of county employment have included work in the treasurer's office, secretarial work for the data processing department and work as a telephone coordinator in the management department. She was working three days a week in the management department when she was appointed to the county board, and she had to quit the job to take the political position.

"It's a different feeling when I walk in the county building," she said of her new job. "I'm still a county employee, but I have a higher status."

Most of her time so far as a county board member has been spent in committee meetings and in reading the minutes of previous meetings. "I haven't really formulated many ideas about county government yet. There aren't too many plans I can initiate in six months."

One area Mrs. Coles would like to see improvement in is service for people. "If I call a county department or a state office, I have to talk to five offices to get something done. That's attorney's fees have been high, and money was one of the reasons she decided to take the office.

frustrating for people. It should be done at one office. It gives government a bad reputation."

THE COUNTY needs more housing for younger people, she said. "The growth here is astronomical in price. There should be more housing for the younger generation, townhouses in the $25,000 to $30,000 range."

The Lake County Forest Preserve District, of which she automatically becomes a member, should spend more effort to develop existing preserve land, Mrs. Coles said. "There are areas that would come under heavy use if they were developed."

Her husband is waiting for sentencing, which is to take place at the end of June. An appeal is expected, and Mrs. Coles said her husband would automatically resume office if an appeal is successful.

Attorney's fees have been high, and money was one of the reasons she decided to take the office.

"The money will help us. We are in a financial limbo, and we don't know what will happen in the next few months." County board members receive a $10,000 per year salary.

THE LONG PROCESS that led to her husband's conviction has been hard on both of them, Mrs. Coles said.

"It's been going on for two years now. There was such a hurry to indict him, and then we had to wait a year for the trial. Now we are waiting again for sentencing."

Coles has retained the position of Lake Villa Township supervisor despite his conviction, Mrs. Coles said.

The extortion conviction stemmed from Coles' term as county board chairman and liquor commissioner, from 1972 to 1974. He was convicted accepting money from tavern owners in return for liquor license favors. Coles claimed the monies he accepted were campaign contributions.

THE LONG PROCESS that led to her husband's conviction has been hard on both of them, Mrs. Coles said.

"It's been going on for two years now. There was such a hurry to indict him, and then we had to wait a year for the trial. Now we are waiting again for sentencing."

Coles has retained the position of Lake Villa Township supervisor despite his conviction, Mrs. Coles said.

The extortion conviction stemmed from Coles' term as county board chairman and liquor commissioner, from 1972 to 1974. He was convicted accepting money from tavern owners in return for liquor license favors. Coles claimed the monies he accepted were campaign contributions.

Buehler wins Paddock Racquetball title

Nine racquetball enthusiasts were crowned Sunday as the best in their class, in Paddock Publications first annual Racquetball Tournament of Champions.

Those competing in championship matches Sunday at The Court House, Arlington Heights, were survivors of competition held at nine area racquetball facilities for the past several weeks.

Buehler YMCA in Palatine won the team trophy in the event on the basis of the performance of its entrants, five of whom made it to the final matches.

In the Men's A category, Paul Nigro, representing the Northwest Suburban YMCA defeated John Robson of the Schaumburg Court House, 21-18 and 21-20. Nigro, of Glenview, is an avid racquetball player who has won a number of tournaments since learning the game six years ago.

Women's A competition found a couple of familiar arch rivals vying for the title, won by Lois Dowd of Winnetka, who defeated Ade Crabtree of Wheeling, 21-16, 21-12.

"It could have gone either way," said Mrs. Dowd, who has met Mrs. Crabtree in other tournaments. Both women have been at the sport seven years and play at least three times a week.

Mrs. Dowd, who also teaches racquetball, represented Forest Grove Racquet Club while Mrs. Crabtree represented the Arlington Court House.

The Men's Seniors Division, for men 35 to 45 years old, was won by Tom Street, representing Forest Grove Racquet Club. Street, of Morton Grove, defeated Roger Eggert of the Schaumburg Court House, 21-4 and 21-8.

In the Juniors division, Steve Breckenridge took the first place trophy by defeating Robert Riefstahl, 21-9 and 21-13. Breckenridge, of Palatine, represented Arlington Indoor Tennis while the second place finisher, Riefsahl, played out of the Buehler YMCA.

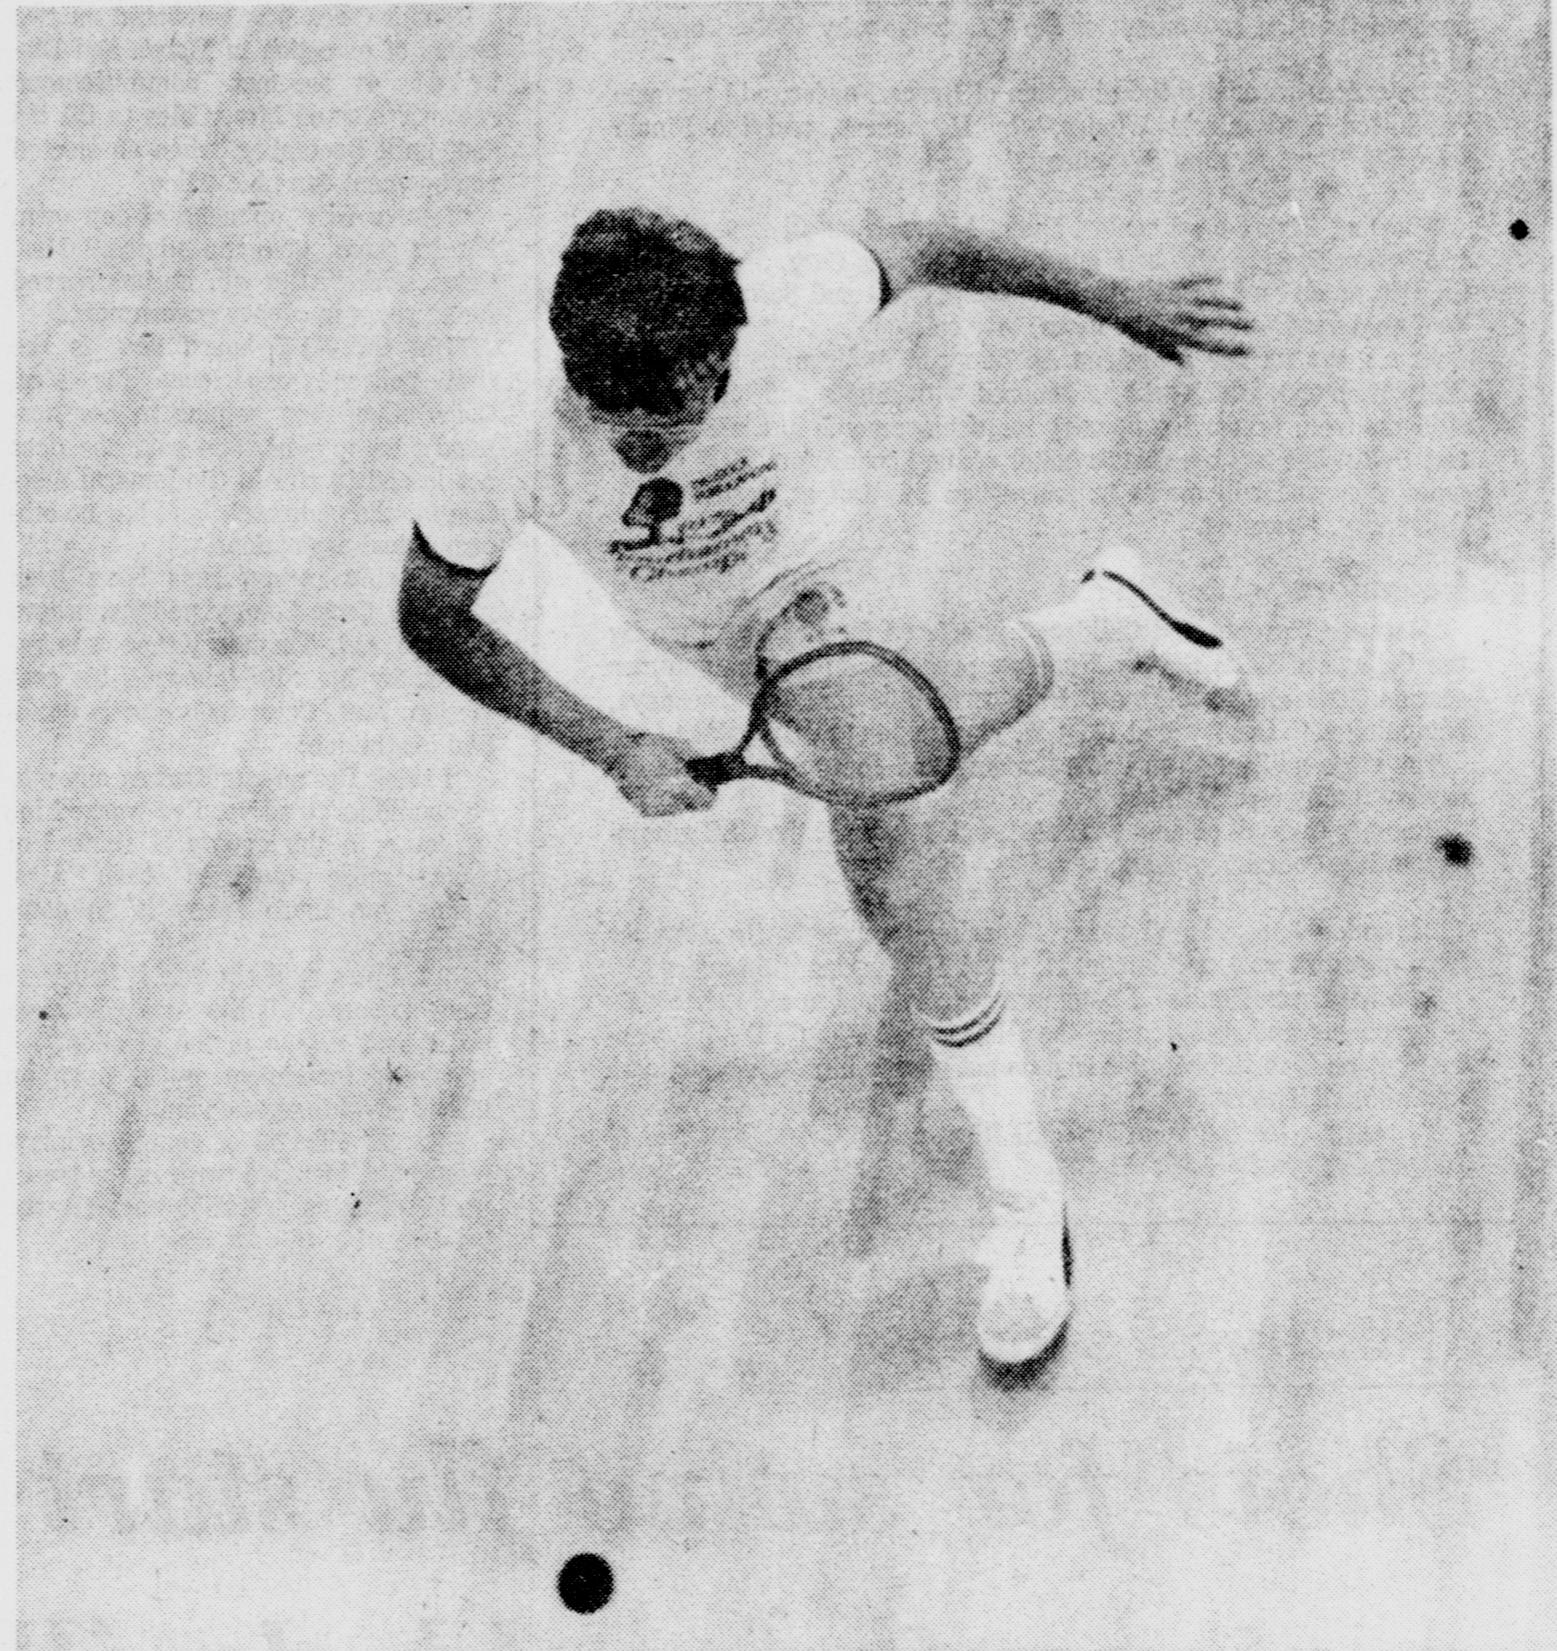

In the Men's Master's division for men 45 years old and up, William Shook of Buehler YMCA won the title by defeating Dorsey Boult of the Schaumburg Court House, 21-14 and 21-16. Shook, who plays racquetball daily, is from Barrington while his opponent is from Palatine.

Nineteen-year-old Gary Meiser of Buehler YMCA, took first place in the Men's B division by defeating John Williams of Arlington Indoor Tennis, 21-20 and 21-7. A student at Southern Illinois University, Meiser is from Barrington while Williams is a resident of Bloomingdale.

In the Men's C division, Terry Marker, representing Arlington Court House, won his division title by defeating Richard Abruscato of Northwest Suburban YMCA. Marker, from Des Plaines, made it to the finals by getting out of his club's tournament, which had 21 entries in the C division.

Georgia Maisel won the Women's B title on a forfeit when her opponent, Gayle Rowe, came up with a sore neck on Sunday and could not compete. Miss Maisel, who plays racquetball six days a week, is from Northbrook and represented Forest Grove Racquet Club.

The Women's C division was won by Gioriann Fredin of Barrington, representing the Buehler YMCA. The mother of two girls, Mrs. Fredin has only been playing racquetball for eight months and the win was her first in tournament competition outside Buehler. A Northbrook resident, she defeated Sandi Kintz of Arlington Court House, 21-3, 20-21 and 11-8.

RUNNER UP. John Robson, representing the Paddock Publications Tournament of Champions. Schaumburg Court House, shows the form that Competition in the tourney ended Sunday when winners were crowned in nine divisions.

Push Sunday winning streak to eight in row

Sox take double dip from Tribe

The Chicago White Sox won their eighth straight Sunday game and their 16th in the last 21 outings as they swept a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians Sunday.

The wins pushed the Sox record to 25-21, the most games they have been over .500 since the season started.

Ken Brett and Jesse Jefferson combined on a three-hitter to pitch the Chicago White Sox to a 5-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians Sunday which completed a doubleheader sweep.

Brett pitched seven innings, allowing only two singles to gain his third straight victory since coming to the White Sox from the Yankees last month. Jefferson hurled the final two innings and gave up only a single in the eighth.

Jorge Orta's triple scored Lamar Johnson with the first Chicago run in the fourth and the White Sox scored twice more in the fifth on Alan Bannister's run-scoring single and a throwing error by Cleveland catcher Ray Fosse. Buddy Bradford also had a solo homer for Chicago in the seventh.

Bucky Dent broke an 0-for-32 slump with a triple to right center and came home with what proved to be the winning run on Jim Essian's single in the fourth inning Sunday, giving the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the first game of a doubleheader.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Jim Spencer singled, advanced to second on an errant attempted pickoff by pitcher Jackie Brown. Nyls Nyman then doubled, scoring Spencer and Jack Brohamer followed with another double to score Nyman.

Cleveland scored its two runs in the seventh when Larvel Blanks walked and scored on Duane Kuiper's triple. It was the 10th and final hit off starter Pete Vuckovich who was relieved by Dave Hamilton and later Francisco Barrios. Rick Manning's sacrifice fly scored Kuiper.

Vuckovich got credit for his fourth win in five decisions, while Barrios got his first save. Brown saw his record dip to 5-3.

Olympic tickets on sale

Tickets to see the United States Olympic basketball team in action at Prospect High School Thursday, June 24 go on sale today at the Mount Prospect State Bank, 111 E. Busse Ave., Mount Prospect.

Tickets for the exhibition, to be played against an all-star aggregation of professionals, are $6 each and will be limited to two per customer. The Prospect field seats 3,500, so fans are encouraged to purchase tickets well in advance of the game.

The Olympic selection committee Saturday announced the final 15 candidates for the U.S. team. The squad will be cut down to 12 at a later date. The fifteen are: Mitch Kupchak, Tom La-Gard, Phil Ford and Walt Davis of North Carolina, Mark Lansberger and Scott Lloyd of Arizona St., Scott May and Quinn Buckner of Indiana, Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame, Kenny Carr of North Carolina St., Otis Birdsong of Houston, Phil Hubbard of Michigan, Tate Armstrong of Duke, Steve Sheppard of Maryland, and Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee.

The opposition will include Bob Love of the Chicago Bulls and will be coached by DePaul head man Ray Meyer and Blue Demon athletic director Gene Sullivan.

The game is cosponsored by the Mount Prospect State Bank and the Prospect State Bank and Club.

THE WINNER. Paul Nigro, left, is congratulated by John Robson, whom Nigro has just defeated to win the Men's A title. Nigro defeated Robson in two close sets, 21-18 and 21-20.

Astrodomo hex continues as Cubs drop 2 decisions

Rookie Joaquin Andujar pitched a two-hitter in the opener and the Houston Astros struck for four runs in the first inning of the second game to sweep the Chicago Cugs 2-0 and 5-1 Sunday.

Gilbert Rondon, another Astro rookie, won the second game by allowing six hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Houston hitters backed Rondon, 2-1, with five hits and four runs in the first inning. Rob Andrews, Bob Watson and Jerry DaVanton drove in the runs, and Andrews scored on an error by second baseman Manny Trillo.

Bob Watson's run-scoring single in the first and Roger Metzger's sacrifice fly in the second accounted for the two Houston runs as the hard-throwing Andujar simply overpowered the Cubs' hitters with his second straight complete game, striking out two. Andujar is now 2-2.

The first 11 Chicago batters were retired before Bill Madlock lined a sharp single to left and the next hitter, Jose Morales, walked. But Andujar got Larry Bittner to ground out the inning and then retired the next 15 hitters. Jose Cardenal got the other two — off Adjuar's glove — with two in the ninth.

It was five days ago that Andujar two-hit the Cincinnati Reds for his first major league victory. The rookie from the Dominican Republic spent five years in the Reds' farm system but never made it to the Cincinnati roster before being traded to Houston at the end of last season.

The punchless Cubs will return to the friendly confines of Wrigley Field for a six-game homestand that begins cisions with the Braves this year, signed for more than $1 million as a free agent and appears ready to pay dividends.

The Houston Astros follow Atlanta into Chicago for a three-game set Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The Cubs obviously have some evening up to do against the domers.

BOSTON CELTIC center Dave Cowens hits the deck while Phoenix's Ricky Sobers (4) launches a shot during the sixth game of the NBA playoffs Sunday. Alvan Adams (33) led the Suns with 20 points but Boston prevailed 87-80 to win their 13th NBA title.

Celts top Suns for NBA title

Charlie Scott with 25 points led five Boston starters in double figures as the Celtics won their 13th NBA title with an 87-80 victory over the Phoenix Suns Sunday afternoon.

Dave Cowens added 21 points, including two layups to put the Celtics back in command after Phoenix's only lead of the second half, 67-66, midway through the fourth quarter, Jo Jo White finished with 15 and John Havlicek and Paul Silas with 10 each.

Rookies Alvan Adams with 20 points and Ricky Sobers with 19 paced Phoenix.

The Celtics won the best-of-seven series 4-2 by breaking the home court advantage which held true in the first five games. It was the 13th championship for Boston in the last 19 years.

Boston pulled out to a low-scoring 33-33 halftime lead by outscoring the Suns, 16-8, in the last nine minutes. Phoenix came back to tie the score twice in the final two minutes of the third quarter, then went ahead by one point on a free throw by Sobers with 7:25 left.

Cowens then went to work to establish a 71-67 Boston advantage. Phoenix was within 73-71 with 4:23 left when the Celtics ran off eight straight points, two by Havlicek, two by Cowens and four by White to put the game out of reach with a 10-point lead.

Both teams showed the effects of the triple overtime in game 5 as Phoenix shot 37 per cent in the first half and the Celtics only 30 per cent.

After a 25-22 lead with nine minutes left in the second quarter, the Suns managed only a pair of free throws in the next six minutes while Scott and Cowens were pacing the Celtics to a 14-4 margin.

Boston's largest lead was 46-35 three minutes into the third quarter. Adams led the Suns' comeback, getting 11 points in the third quarter, including five of eight field goals. Phoenix shot 55 per cent for the period with Boston hitting 41 per cent.

Cowens controlled the boards with 18 rebounds.

Ash leads French Open bid

Arthur Ashe played like a champion for the first time here and Brian Gottfried and Harold Solomon backed him up with straight sets victories Sunday to mount the strongest U.S. challenge in 21 years at the $210,000 French Open Tennis championships.

The trio joined Eddie Dibbs, a winner on Saturday, to put four Americans through to the last 16 of the men's singles in quest of a title which has not gone to the United States since Tony Trabert's 1955 victory.

Ash completely outclassed West Germany's Juergen Fassbender, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, on the center court of the Roland Garros stadium that lay like a clay oven under blazing 80 degree sunshine.

Orr's choice either Hawks or Blues

Bobby Orr, admitting he is "damaged goods," said Sunday in a copyrighted interview he will sign this week with either the Chicago Black Hawks or St. Louis Blues.

The former Boston Bruins' defenseman made the revelation in an early morning telephoned interview from Toronto to reporter Russ Conway of Lawrence Sunday, a subsidiary of the Lawrence, Mass., Eagle Tribune.

Orr, who became a free agent last week, said he regretted leaving Boston after 10 years, but added, "it looks like I'll be headed to the Chicago Black Hawks or St. Louis Blues."

"My lawyer, Alan Eagleson, is going to meet with these two teams in Montreal today and tomorrow (Sunday and Monday) and I have told him I want it cleaned up this week."

A personal friend of Conway, Orr said in his first interview since becoming a free agent that the Boston club had made stipulations in its last offer of $350,000 per year over the next five years.

The Black Hawks have offered the defenseman a "guaranteed" $500,000 per year for the next five seasons, said Orr, declining to divulge the St. Louis offer.

Ventresca seeks U.S. Open berth

by PAUL LOGAN
It's a question of "keys" for Billy Ventresca.

As head professional of Rolling Green Country Club it would be accomplishing a life-long goal to earn a berth in the United States Open Championship. But qualifying at the sectional level has always been a barrier.

"For some reason it's the one time of the year that I'm awfully keyed up

... just too keyed up," said Ventresca after a practice round last week at Midlothian Country Club — site of today's qualifying.

"I don't seem to play (in the sectionals) as well as I can. I want to play so well that I don't."

So when this 37-year-old Arlington Heights resident tees it up for his tenth try at making the select Open field, he hopes to have a new game plan.

"I want to enjoy the day, No. 1," said Ventresca. "If I don't worry about what I'm doing, I'll be okay. If you try to get too mechanical, it's not going to happen."

The "it's" he referred to was landing one of the coveted seven berths to next week's U.S. Open at Atlanta, Ga. (June 17-20).

There will be 50 men competing in the 36-hole grind, 10 of whom are amateurs. Ventresca made this select field by being among the top 23 in the gigantic 217-man field at the local qualifying at Long Grove's Twin Orchard Country Club last month.

Ventresca turned in the fifth best score that day — a one-over-par 144 — despite 25-30 m.p.h. winds and tricky greens.

On this latter point, Ventresca expected to find Midlothian's greens equally difficult.

"Midlothian always has had real fast greens," he said after testing them last Thursday. "But they seem to have slowed up a bit. I'm not sure what it is, but they're slower. Normally, they're treacherous. It could mean better scoring."

So if the verdant carpets of this former site of the 1914 U.S. Open isn't the key to victory, what is?

"The whole key to victory will be the really good par 3s and the really great par 4s," said Ventresca. "They'll take a lot of good long iron play."

The most challenging par 3s are located on the longer of the two nines — the 3,386-yard par 35 backside. Namely the 11th and the 17th.

"Probably both are going to play about 215 or 210. They're long and well-trapped. The 11th is just a super 3."

The front nine, measuring 3,191 yards and playing to a par 36, presents a problem on the very first hole. This 425-yard par 4 is tough because of the out-of-bounds down the right side and a creek near the green.

The ninth, 10th and 15th are also very rugged par 4s.

"I'll guess a couple over par will make it (the cut)," said Ventresca. "(A 142 is even par.)" "Maybe a 145 or 146 if the weather's nice."

"If I'm playing good, it's the kind of golf course I can play. The golf course is in real good shape. It has very,

Tom Cassidy, a senior, and Dave Huck, a freshman, both were cited for their contributions to the Rockhurst tennis team.

very good fairways and good, very healthy greens."

It's tough for any fine golfer to qualify for the U.S. Open. But for a club pro, it's doubly difficult.

"You've got to take care of your job first," said Ventresca. "In the meantime, you're trying to get into condition."

Billy Ventresca's carrying a heavy "key chain" — he's got to avoid being too keyed up, he has to unlock the doors to the six holes that mean victory or defeat and he must have his over-all game in shape despite the unavoidable country club problems.

"I'd really like to go, there's no question about it," he said of his dream.

If he makes it, he'll have more than paid his dues to play in the world's most prestigious of tournaments.

First Trans-Am

SEBRING, Fla. (UPI)—The late Jochen Rindt of Germany won the first Trans-Am race March 25, 1966, on the 5.2 mile Sebring course that curves through a World War II bomber base. A. J. Foyt also started that race but went out after 32 laps, with a mechanical problem.

Lone champion

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI)—Phil Hill is the only American ever to win the world driving championship. Hill accomplished this single honor in 1961 as a member of the Ferrari team.

Seven years later, after Moose has traveled from Chicago's Hanson Park neighborhood to Elston Avenue in Chicago, it's a 40-minute ride to work each morning from his Schaumburg home.

Moose travels around Illinois, speaking with school children about bicycle safety. Moose shows the boys and girls his World Series film. They cheer when he homers. And Moose tells them not to be bashful; it's OK to boo when he goes down on three strikes.

"When the kids see me," said Moose, "they think I'm from outer space because I have a flat top." Moose always had a flat top. He would not look right with long hair.

It's such a long distance that Moose has traveled from Chicago's Hanson Park neighborhood to Elston Avenue and Moose's old stomping grounds near Central Street and Fullerton Avenue.

There was a nice woman there named Ethel Stevens. She's still alive. One day in 1947, Ethel read about a homerun hitting contest at the International Amphitheatre. It was sponsored by a Chicago newspaper.

Ethel submitted the name of William J. Skowron, Jr., the son of a Chicago sanitation worker. "I didn't want to go," said Moose.

She said, "Moose, you should go!"

Moose Skowron, the big Polish lad from Weber High School, which did not have a baseball program, won that homerun hitting contest.

He went to New York City, belted another homerun during an All-Star game in the Polo Grounds, and he shook hands with Babe Ruth, the dying, frail Babe Ruth, the Sultan of Swat, the Bambino.

Seven years later, after Moose played three sports for two years at Purdue University, the best marbles player from Hanson Park wore a New York Yankee uniform. It was 1954.

The Yankees were in the midst of an incredible streak which saw them win 14 American League pennants between 1949 and 1964.

Only the Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox rose to the AL championship.

The way we see it

End-of-session mess unneeded

With just three weeks remaining in this legislative session, time is growing short for the Illinois General Assembly to act on a large number of important matters.

The legislature must complete its work by June 30, the end of the fiscal year. There are a number of significant bills that must be acted upon, and it appears the legislature stands a good chance of repeating its annual rites of summer by passing dozens of bills during the final days of the session giving only minimal consideration to many of them.

There is still the opportunity to complete the state's business in an orderly fashion.

However, it appears the legislature is willing to wait for the usual crush.

In years past, the legislature has finished work; in many cases, lawmakers were not fully sure what was approved and what failed. Too often, a number of bills have been passed or killed on a single vote with little debate.

Horse trading flourishes in the corridors of the Capitol as lawmakers, who previously dealt with issues with a near-passionate fervor, begin looking for things to swap.

What do you need? becomes the question of the day.

A more rational approach is needed to handle the end of the legislative session.

Important issues such as new medical malpractice insurance, the Regional Transportation Authority and workmen's compensation insurance can be swept along with the flood of other legislation, mostly appropriation matters, that must be handled by the end of the month.

There is still the opportunity to complete the state's business in an orderly fashion.

Evidence of the legislature's end-of-session fever can be seen in history. Too often bills that have not been studied carefully are passed, only to be rejected as poorly drawn by the courts or the governor.

The people of the state are not well served by this haphazard approach to government, and the members of the General Assembly would do well to remember this.

Mental health center has proved its value

The Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Center has proved itself an asset to residents of the area. We hope the state and federal governments will help it continue its valuable role.

The center has applied for $360,000 of federal money to help construct a building which would centralize operations now spread over three locations, including an old farmhouse and an industrial building.

A measure of the community support for the center is the fact that Schaumburg and Elk Grove townships have each pledged $100,000 to the building project and a fund-raising group is mobilizing to raise $70,000 to finance the project.

In applying for the funds, which will be allocated by the Illinois Department of Mental Health, the center is competing with four other mental health centers, including two in Chicago and two Downstate.

The amount of funds is limited to a total of just $631,000, much less than the five agencies have requested.

The state can award partial grants, however. And even if the Elk Grove-Schaumburg center does not get the full amount of its request, we hope the state will give the center the same kind of support it has received from the local community.

PHILADELPHIA, June 7 — Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced in Congress three resolutions. One called for total independence from Britain; the others for preparations for a plan of colonial confederation and the entering into of foreign alliances. Delegates were "enjoined to attend punctually at 10 o'clock" the next day to begin debate on them.

Walker missed real facts when he attacked Chamber

Gov. Dan Walker's recent attack on the Illinois State Chamber in your pages for calling attention to our state's deteriorating business climate has, in effect, blamed the messenger for the message delivered, and avoids facing the facts of a situation which concerns us all.

Over two-thirds of Illinois business men and women surveyed by Central Surveys, Inc., an independent survey firm, expressed dissatisfaction with the state's business environment. These business leaders, not the State Chamber, will be making the decision whether to expand their operations in Illinois, and if new jobs will be staying in Illinois or will be going to other states.

A majority of large manufacturers surveyed revealed that their relative share of total capital investment going into Illinois has declined and will even further over the next 10 years.

EMPLOYERS HAVE TOLD us of their concern over the steadily mounting costs of doing business in Illinois: recent increases in unemployment insurance taxes, workmen's compensation premiums and threats of hiking corporate income taxes is giving Illinois the reputation of being a state where business is treated as an unwelcome resident. These factors figure strongly in our state's attraction as a business location.

Burying our heads in the sand won't make things better. Hoping a bad situation simply goes away never solves a problem. But a unified effort on the part of business, labor and government to keep Illinois an economic powerhouse would start us back toward being a respected and sought-after home for businesses and jobs.

taxpayers' money subsidizes a mass transportation system it must provide service to all.

Hopefully the public hearing to be held on June 16 will not dwell on the cost of the bus system but rather on how to make it work effectively for the residents of this village.

P.D. 4's want equality

I am a second-class citizen. I live in a P.D. 4.

Up to now, second-class citizens were the poor, the old, the illiterate etc. To this grouping, we now must add the planned unit development (P.D. 4) dweller. We, as second class citizens, do not have all the rights and privileges that are enjoyed by the majority of the Wheeling community.

We pay real estate taxes like everyone else in Wheeling. (Taxes are $1,000 plus for a $37,000 townhouse). And so do you fellow Wheeling residents. A portion of your taxes goes to the village which provides you with street cleaning, snow plowing, maintenance and repair of your streets and street lights, traffic signs, and police protection. The same portion of our taxes go to the village, but none of the money is spent on these services for our streets. To add additional insult, we must pay real estate taxes on our streets plus pay an extra fee to our condominium association to get the above services you automatically get for your tax dollar.

This is why the P.D. 4's want their streets dedicated. We want the same services from our tax dollars as you get from yours. If we can't get equal services, then indeed we are second class citizens.

Wheeling needs buses

Specific comments on changing the Wheeling bus service were given in this column on April 3, 1976. These comments should be followed up with some general comments regarding the need for mass transportation here in Wheeling.

If the repair of Manchester Drive ($68,000 for half a mile) is the visible top of the iceberg of road repair costs, then the total cost of maintaining roads must be a good size bill to taxpayers. A study of road maintenance costs should be undertaken with the same enthusiasm that people have for condemning the bus service.

Secondly, the National Safety Council has said repeatedly that the majority of accidents occur within one mile of the driver's home. How many of the 1,304 reported accidents that occurred in Wheeling in 1975 could have been prevented by a workable mass transportation system. How does Wheeling compare with other towns that have mass transportation systems? One would think that overcrowded Dundee Road 33,000 vehicles a day, twice its design capacity, and no or no effective mass transportation system would be good grounds to red line Wheeling for higher auto insurance rates.

THIRDLY, THE QUESTION of conservation of natural resources. We Americans represent only 6 per cent of the world's population, but we consume more than a third of the world's energy resources, most of this in oil reserves. Nonrenewable resources like oil are being mismanaged on a large scale by this generation, at the expense of future generations. Oil has other uses besides being used in the car, it is one of the basic chemicals used in manufacturing medicines and drugs. An effective mass transportation system is one of the necessary components in a total conservation policy, which every town in this country should be undertaking.

FINALLY, the trend towards providing only senior citizens with mass transportation, such as Wheeling Township is doing and is being proposed by some village officials here in Wheeling, is bound to lead to a class action legal suit being filed on the grounds of discrimination against people under 60 years of age. Ant hills—elaborate excavations Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Lolita G. Brodie, 16, of Gallup, N.M., for her question:

WHY DO ANTS MAKE PILES OF DIRT?

If ants were as big as people, most likely they would crowd all other creatures off the earth. This is because there are so many of them. So far, experts have classified more than 10,000 different ant species—and this may be only half the total number. These tiny insects are at home almost everywhere, and a single nest may for a skinny worm. However, for her sands of individuals.

To understand the problems of the ant, it helps to scale ourselves down to her point of view. To her, a thimble is a large room and three-feet is a long walk. A crumb is as big as a boulder, and she can scamper comfortably through a tunnel too small for a skinny worm. However, for her size, her body is much stronger than yours, and she can lift perhaps 50 times her own weight.

An ant colony is a strictly regimented community and most, though not all, species nest in the ground. On the surface, it looks like a pile of loose dirt. Underground it is a marvelous maze of mini-rooms and tiny tunnels, reaching down through several connecting levels.

The whole thing is an elaborate excavation, scaled down to a suitable ant size. The rooms and tunnels are hollowed out by the industrious workers—and thousands of them are kept busy maintaining it. Every crumb of excavated dirt is toted to the surface—and dumped on the ground. And so, as the colony increases and the nest grows larger, the piles of loose dirt on the surface grow bigger.

The colony begins when a mated female selects a suitable spot—and bites off the wings she used during her marriage flight. Usually she is alone, so she must take the first steps by herself. She lays a few eggs and feeds her first brood on saliva. They are weak and rather fragile, but strong enough to find proper food for her. Hence the second brood of workers is stronger.

Soon the young queen is producing brood after brood of sturdy workers, willing and able to carry on a multitude of duties. Hundreds, then thousands of them toil to dig out their underground rooms and networks of tunnels. Several tunnels lead to exits on the surface. Here the busy builders haul up their excavated dirt and dump it in a pile, bit by bit.

The queen ant, naturally, has a special chamber where she lays her never-ending supply of eggs. Teams of workers, knowing just what to do, carry the new eggs to a certain room and then shift them from nursery to nursery as they mature. Some rooms are used to store foods; others are trash deposits.

Some ant species keep aphid insects that supply them with sweet liquids called honeydew. These aphid cows are kept in sort of underground cow barns. Some species cultivate small fungus plants in underground gardens. These and many other excavated pockets contribute to the pile of loose dirt on the surface.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Woody Thomas, 11, of Summersville, W.V., for his question:

IS IT TRUE THERE ARE NO SNAKES IN IRELAND?

Certain snakes are kept in zoos so that the people of Ireland have a chance to see what they look like. But it is safe to say that there are no native snakes in Ireland. There also are no native snakes in Hawaii, though in this case snakes were brought in from elsewhere and made themselves at home.

The average land snake can slither successfully through his own neighborhood, but he is not by nature a long-distance traveler.

Leading the troops

by MONICA PERRIN

Girl Scouts really are not a bunch of "goody-two-shoes," and neither are their leaders.

Just ask Kathy Durec — if you can catch up with her as she strides back and forth between the gas pumps and the service station which she manages.

Kathy, who lives in Wheeling and operates Ye Old Towne Pump in Des Plaines, is one of many single people who now lead scout troops. There are also couples, like the William Brandts of Des Plaines. Mr. Brandt is quite popular with the girls in their troop, says Mrs. Brandt.

But there are not enough women and men, single or married, young or old, volunteering to be Girl Scout leaders these days. The Girl Scout Council of Northwest Cook County estimates nearly 2,000 girls in its 19-town area would like to be Girl Scouts and are waiting for leaders.

THE COUNCIL is distributing placemats to area restaurants in an appeal for leaders. The mats depict a Girl Scout with the legend, "All dressed up — no place to go," as in the sketch at left.

According to Marilyn Marier, head of the Council's Volunteer Personnel Services Committee, many scout mothers who used to assume the role of troop leader have gone to work or back to school.

"Every volunteer organization has felt the crunch," Ms. Marier notes.

In attempting to interest people in becoming scout leaders, Ms.

Marier points out that it need not interfere with a full-time job nor does it require any extraordinary abilities.

Troops always meet in the evening, she explained, and there always are at least two, sometimes three leaders assigned to a troop. As for what to do and how to do it, the Girl Scout Council provides extensive orientation and training resources, and of course, the scout manual details all of the "badges" and "challenges" that the girls can choose to do.

Beyond that, "you can just let them do what they are interested in, let them plan and do a whole project, or whatever," says Kathy Durec.

Kathy's Rolling Meadows troop is a "cadette" group — junior high age. She is very matter-of-fact and relaxed about the undertaking. She has found that girls that age are "more difficult to handle, and it is also more difficult to keep their interest, than the younger ones," but she counters by asking them what they want to do and letting them do it. If they don't follow through, then some project or outing may fizz, but they learn responsibility.

Kathy's troop just completed a film which they put together themselves, and they earlier participated in an environmental cleanup. Between projects, they may each do some research on a topic like backpacking and present their information to the group at a meeting, or they may plan an activity like "tubing" — coasting down a hill on a specially designed inner tube.

IN THE SUMMER, there is usually a camping trip to the Girl Scout camp in Wisconsin. But, Ms. Marier adds, "if camping isn't your bag, one of the other leaders or a parent can fill in for you."

Kathy is herself a Girl Scout "drop-out" — in fact, she never "flew up" from Brownies. But she rekindled an interest after a friend asked her to help with a troop and eventually took over the troop herself.

She has found that her girls, like herself at a younger age, sometimes don't want to be identified as Girl Scouts — they don't wear uniforms and sometimes balk at displaying their troop number on T-shirts at camp-outs — but they still want to be in scouting. They basically enjoy it. So she doesn't pressure them about the trappings.

Leaders and scouts alike see the activity as a growth experience in terms of personal development and general knowledge. And, of course, scouts have had a tradition of service to the community. They are often asked to participate in community activities, to help out where needed.

Anyone interested in becoming a Girl Scout leader may contact the Girl Scout Council at 640-0500.

KATHY DUREC, a Wheeling single who manages Ye Olde Towne Pump in Des Plaines, is a Girl Scout "drop-out" but leads a troop of Rolling Meadows junior high girls.

Sponsored by the Parents Association of the center, the fair will be held from 1 to 6 p.m. both days.

IN KEEPING WITH the country's 200th birthday celebration, the fair will also feature a Bicentennial booth. Other festivities will be the judging of the baking contest on Saturday, clowns, a safari ride, miniature golf, an arts and crafts booth, a beer garden with music, a Kountry Kitchen and coffee shoppe. Games of skill, a fun jail, rickshaw rides and refreshments are also on the schedule.

Home sewing on the increase for '76

by JOANNE SCHREIBER

As the sewing goes, so goes the nation.

While the rest of the country was in an economic slump, the sewing industry was depressed, too, despite a traditional record of increased sewing activity during hard times.

But experts on national economics have predicted a turnaround for '76.

The sewing industry is unlike any other in its diversification. It is composed of five elements: fibers, fabrics, patterns, notions and sewing machines representing thousands of separate products, coordinated through retailing and sold directly to the consumer.

IT IS A BIG industry, totalling $3.5 billion in sales in a good year such as 1971. Of this, $2 billion is spent directly on fabrics and the remainder on the other ingredients. As many as 170 million patterns may be sold in a good year.

Industry sources say that 52 million persons are sewing. The sewing industry, like any other, measures success by sales. Women were sewing last year but they weren't buying.

The pattern industry slumped because there were no strong style changes, executives said, and women reused their patterns.

Zipper sales were down because women were making separates which require short zippers or no zipper at all.

Fabric sales, and consequently fiber sales, sagged because women evidently decided to use up materials on hand before buying more.

While natural fibers continue to be popular, polyester is still the most-sewed fiber. A staggering 1,470 billion square yards of fabrics will be sold over the counters this year, with 74 per cent containing some polyester.

Increased disposable income, combined with greater fashion awareness is also credited with the increase in sewing.

Most fabrics are sold through chain stores with J.C. Penney currently the single biggest fabric retailer.

Underlining sheers may give you problems

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I am making a long dress out of a crinkly georgette fabric which I have underlined. Now I am trying to finish the hem and just can't make it hang right. Please tell us how to finish these sheer fabrics? — Mrs. Mary G.

Dear Mrs. G.,

I think your trouble is caused by underlining this sheer fabric. Very rarely should any sheer fabric be underlined, especially in the skirt. I often suggest underlining the bodice, set in waist band or cuffs, but the skirt should be free hanging from the lining. The two fabrics will simply not hang the same and you will also lose the sheer quality of your fabric.

You can attach the extra lining at the waist if it is a one-piece dress. Simply attach it at the shoulders and possibly the armholes. Then slip stitch the lining to each side of the zipper to hold it in place.

The lining and the dress should be hemmed separately for perfect results.

* * *

Dear Eunice Farmer,
I require more room for my sleeves because of square shoulders and large upper arms. I find that the cap of the sleeves are shaped differently in patterns. Some have a high and narrow cap, others a wider, shallow cap. How can I determine the shape of the sleeve before I purchase the pattern? — Mrs. M. Z.

Dear Mrs. M. Z.,

Almost all patterns will have the high, narrow sleeve cap. The exception would be the much more tailored shirt styling where you will find the cap of the sleeve resembling a man's shirt.

If you find a sleeve that fits you well, you can make the sleeves from this pattern on all your garments, provided you also use the armhole from the same pattern.

You will also find that a slightly dropped shoulder will give you more room for your arms and it, too, will be cut with a rather flat sleeve cap.

* * *

For Eunice Farmer's booklet, "All About Sleeves," address a long envelope to yourself, put 13 cents postage on it and enclose it with 10 cents in an envelope addressed to Eunice Farmer, in care of this newspaper.

* * *

Dear Eunice Farmer,
I am confused about today's woven fabrics that are marked permanent press, wash and wear, wrinkle resistant or mini-care. I have found almost without exception that these fabrics still need to be pressed. Am I being overly critical or am I doing something wrong when I wash my clothes? — Mrs. T. E. H.

Dear Mrs. T. E. H.,

Although a lot has to do with the way you wash and dry your clothes, touch up pressing is usually desired. I would suggest using a fabric softener in the washer and anti-static agent in the dryer. Also, a very important rule is to take the clothes out of the washer or dryer the minute the cycle is completed. If you leave clothes in your dryer after this point, they acquire new permanent wrinkles that are difficult to remove with any pressing.

Today's fabrics seem like a dream to me. I remember when all washables had to be starched to retain the finish, then sprinkled until they were almost wet. Finally, you spent hours doing your ironing.

I think most garments look better if they are simply touched up with the steam iron. This only takes minutes to do and is well worth the extra effort. Of course, this can be eliminated with most children's clothes as well as casual or sports wear.

Sew simple

by Eunice Farmer

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I am sway-backed because of a spine curvature and consequently have difficulty fitting waistbands to skirts and pants. I have tried folding out some fabric just below the waistband, but because of full hips, I really need this fabric. Please help. — Mrs. A. O.

Dear Mrs. A. O.,

One of the most successful answers to this question is your choice of pattern. I would recommend a curved waistband instead of a straight one. This waistband actually fits the curve of your hips and doesn't extend above the waistband. It curves lower in the back which eliminates some of the extra fabric that is found on most patterns.

There is such a pattern, Vogue 9413, with a contour waistband. There are also seams at the center back of the leg, which are often a great advantage for fitting. I hope you will try this pattern and let me know the results.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Moldy hay, dirty filters harm lungs

Dear Dr. Lamb — I contracted farmer's lung by inhaling moldy hay, feeding our pet rabbits. I am going through a bad experience with coughing and spitting constantly. I am under a doctor's care — taking medications for the coughing spells and for my throat inflammation that I suffered. The doctor told me I have an allergy to moldy hay and this disease will take some time to go away. I am still spitting watery and foamy material more than five weeks after I inhaled this moldy hay.

Can you tell me more about this farmer's lung? Is there a possibility to get shots if this is an allergy? I hope you can help me with more information.

Dear Reader — Yes it is an allergy. It is caused by the spores of fungi. The spores are inhaled and when enough of them reach the tiny air sacs, the alveoli, in the lungs they sensitize the lung membrane. The next time you are exposed to more of the spores you have an allergic response of the lung tissues. They swell and are inflamed. Obviously they are not much good then for exchanging oxygen and carbon dioxide.

The inflammation results in formation of excess secretions that must be removed from the lungs, hence the coughing spells. The amount of sputum produced is usually limited.

THE DISEASE can lead to fibrosis and scarring of the lung tissues, causing permanent lung damage. If you have just one attack you usually recover completely with no important residual lung damage.

The fungi spores that cause similar illnesses are also in the filters of air conditioners. So this is a warning to my readers to be sure system clean. Similar infections from fungi spores result in fungi system clean. Similar infections from fungi spores result in fungi from bird droppings, called bird-breeder's lung. There is a whole series of these called, maplebark-striper's lung, mushroom worker's lung and in sugar cane workers, bagassosis.

The illness causes fever, chills, malaise, cough and sometimes chest pain and weight loss. The symptoms will come on the same day of exposure in the person who is already sensitized.

THE CHEST X RAY may be normal or show a patchy generalized distribution of the inflammation. There may be changes in the lung function tests associated with gas exchange for normal respiration.

You can get some relief from symptoms from the adrenocortical hormones such as cortisone and related medications. It is not definite though that these will prevent fibrosis and changes in the lung that can follow as a complication of the disease.

The most important treatment is prevention. A person who has this illness should entirely avoid any exposure to the fungi. That means the sugar cane worker has to give it up, the farmer has to quit farming and you should give up feeding your pet rabbits. Repeated exposure can lead to permanent damage to your lungs.

To give you some more information on how the lungs work I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-4, Keeping Your Lungs Fit. Others who want this information can forward 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Even the best cooks don't always measure

Most frustrating cook to deal with? The one who cooks up a luscious dish and who is stymied when you ask for the recipe.

I knew what was coming from Jim Maxwell's expression when he was asked how the Bourguignon was made. He knew what was in it and how it was cooked — but he was blank on how much of anything he added. Those of you who are by-guess-and-by-taste cooks can easily handle this one.

He cut up two pounds of boneless chuck in large cubes, floured them and browned them in oil, first having sauteed a piece of garlic and three large sliced onions. Then he flamed this mix with a liberal dousing of brandy. He went on to add some canned Italian tomatoes, a large can of tomato paste, the juice of a lemon and some lemon peel (which he pulled out after an hour), a sprinkling of oregano, a little Worcestershire and A-1 sauces and about a cup of red burgundy.

This cooked on low heat for several hours. About an hour before we were due, he added a can of white onions (drained), a box of frozen limas, chunks of celery, carrots and potatoes, and let it all simmer. Just before serving, he added a pound of sauteed small mushrooms.

Served with a salad and French bread, it was superb. But what a tussle extracting the recipe!

Dear Dorothy: Any way to conceal a scratch on a brand-new black patent bag? — Dorothy Warman

Rub on a good black paste shoe polish, count to 10, then rub.

Dear Dorothy: about the loosely knit dress that stretched after each wearing: Hanging it over two wooden hangers (so the skirt won't pull down), steaming it in the bathroom, then letting it dry, ought to help. — Ann Moss

You can tell the end of the school year is at hand when . . .

. . . Your kids start humming "Born Free" in their sleep and ask you to buy $4-a-pair spikes for baseball.

. . . You drive past your school and see teachers at every window gazing wistfully into space.

. . . EVERY BABYSITTER you have ever known has either moved to Florida, plans to take a three-month vacation to California on what you have paid her all year, or has already lined up a job for the summer — and you need a babysitter.

. . . Your kids start preparing you for the final report card with stories of how Mrs. Jones really hates girls with brown hair and blue eyes and that's why there will be a "D" in the slot for math and a check in the box called "Listens to and follows directions."

. . . You walk through the halls of your school and all the kids are either playing games in the classroom, playing games on the playground or playing games in the principal's office where they have been sent for getting rowdy during game playing time.

. . . Every babysitter that has been referred to you by well-meaning friends wants $2.50 an hour, or half of what you make before taxes.

. . . YOUR KID comes home beside himself because he just found out that Mrs. Smith is allergic to plants and that's what you've bought for her as an end-of-school present.

. . . You walk into your school, wade through three feet of papers,

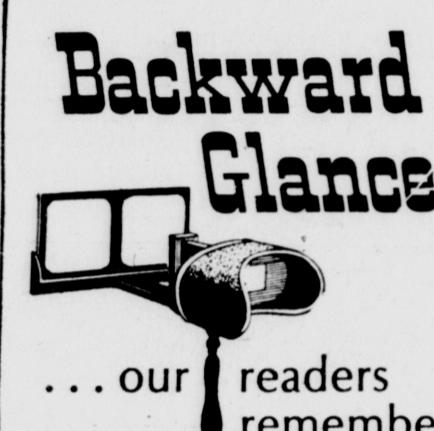

Her love for America still strong after 52 years here

I was born in Oslo, Norway, in 1905. From early childhood, U.S.A. interested me very much, mostly the stories of the pioneers who worked so hard to make a life for themselves in the wilderness.

As I grew older, a strong desire to come to U.S.A. obsessed me. In sixth grade I studied English at night, walking a mile each way in all kinds of weather. In seventh grade, the class was moved to a school two and a half miles away. In high school, we were given two more years of English, a little harder. Later I enrolled in a special English class at the university.

ONE BLUSTERING March night in 1924, at dinner, I asked my mother to write to my uncle in Chicago. Next step was to ask for a visa and see if I could make the quota.

Then I want to a doctor to make sure my health was fine and there were no serious family diseases; then to another doctor to see that my mind was all right and there was no insanity in the family. Finally I went to the police station for a paper declaring that we were honest, decent people.

By that time, I felt I must be good
